GASG Meeting 95 - 'Ammonia Mania'
Thursday 26th November 2026 - Wellcome Collection, London

We are delighted to announce the details of our next meeting: 'Ammonia Mania', on Thursday 26th November at the Wellcome Collection in London.

Ammonia is generating considerable excitement within the research community as a proposed energy vector (ie, to be used to transport energy around the world) and direct energy source, but also has a long history of importance in healthcare and environmental protection. However, it is a notoriously difficult gas to measure. This meeting will bring you up to date with the latest on this important gas across a wide range of applications and sensor technologies.

Up-to-date details of the programme are available on the GASG website, so book now to reserve your place at what promises to be a highly relevant and timely meeting.

Please note – This meeting will be for in-person attendees only, with no online access on the day or speaker recordings available after the event. (Presentations will be accessible to members as usual, subject to publication approvals).

Important – Attendee photographs, videos and/or audio recordings may be made at this event for future use by GASG in publicity material for the benefit of the group, although individuals will not be identified without express permission. Registration is assumed to confirm agreement to these terms, but If you have any objection to being included in such content please discuss with us by emailing admin@gasg.info.

We look forward to welcoming you to the meeting!
